Subject: Open letter by 441 NALSAR alumni to condemn the attempt to persecute students and faculty members of NALSAR.

Ref: Letter No. BCI:D:5449/2026
Letter No. BCI:D:5450/2026

Dear Mr. Mishra,

On 13 August 2026, the letters mentioned above were issued on the letterhead of the Bar Council of India (BCI). Through these letters, the BCI asked the Vice Chancellor of NALSAR University of Law to institute an inquiry and submit a report naming faculty and students who were involved in voicing their opinion about inviting the Chief Justice of India to this year's convocation. The first letter (BCI:D:5449/2026) had barred NALSAR students graduating in 2026 from enrolling as advocates. Though this bar on enrolment and the demand for an inquiry and report were withdrawn shortly thereafter due to public pressure, we write to condemn the manner in which you have approached the question of students, faculty, and the autonomy of universities in India. The letters reflect a lack of empathy for students and their mental health, disregard for the fundamental right to free speech, and a tendency to deal with matters of young students and educated faculty in an arbitrary and high-handed manner. It is apparent that the BCI had no jurisdiction to issue these letters. What is more disturbing is that the language of the first letter reflects a predisposition to dominate students and faculty with coercive threats that restrict speech on university campuses, putting tremendous pressure on the mental health of students.

It needs no reminding that students script the future of this country, and it is in the interest of the country that its universities provide an ecosystem for a free-thinking and responsible citizenry to flourish. Legal education especially requires this, as it aims to promote the principle of the rule of law. This requires the ability to raise questions about fundamental assumptions we may hold about state power. Non-arbitrariness can only be practised if we allow space for raising questions in a peaceful way. That is how law aims to ethically tame politics. The two letters issued by the BCI are a far cry from these ideals. In fact, they betray an arbitrary approach towards young students training to be lawyers. You must seriously reflect upon the unconstitutional, arbitrary, and inhumane messages communicated through these letters.

We fully appreciate that you may personally disagree with the substance of what the students demanded. That does not call for an attempt to trample upon their right to free speech. The students of NALSAR had communicated their opinion to their Vice Chancellor. This was a matter internal to NALSAR. It was no occasion for a statutory body entrusted with regulating the profession and the standards of legal education to call for a witch hunt of students and faculty.

The BCI has no role in regulating matters of free speech on university campuses. Its role in legal education is limited to promoting legal education and to laying down standards of such education. Matters relating to freedom of speech on campus are internal to the university and beyond the jurisdiction of the BCI. The BCI is not given any powers to institute disciplinary inquiries against students and faculty, or to impose penalties on them, that too without notice or hearing.

The language of the first letter is not just distasteful. Rather, it vilifies students and faculty by alleging that they indulge in 'groupism', 'dirty politics', 'nasty politics' and 'instigating and misguiding students.' Such loose statements are unbecoming of a statutory body entrusted with obligations towards the legal profession and legal education. The letter calls for identifying and reporting persons 'who were principally instrumental in initiating the campaign or representation, drafting it, circulating it through media, organising meetings connected with it, coordinating or mobilising participation, communicating with the press or media on behalf of the group, administering any official or organised electronic or social-media group used for coordination'. All these actions are protected under free speech. The BCI letters signal as if the students and faculty were hatching a criminal conspiracy. Voicing dissent is not a criminal offense in India.

We urge you to appreciate that universities are autonomous bodies. Being a regulator of legal education, this must be obvious to you. A university is a community of senior and junior scholars embarking on a journey of inquiry and learning. University life is that precious moment in an individual's journey where they experiment with ideas. Free speech is a fundamental part of that journey.

We need look no further than India's struggle for independence to see that lawyers across the ideological spectrum came together to oppose colonial domination by exercising their right to speak freely. Law students in India are inheritors of that legacy. They are in that phase of their lives where they must experiment with ideas. This space must be nurtured and protected and not subjected to threats of persecution. If the BCI has an opinion on the present matter in NALSAR, it should approach it with the spirit of dialogue and discussion, not coercion and domination. That unfortunately only came as an afterthought, subsequent to the backlash against the letters issued by you.

We hope that the current events will initiate reflections within the BCI on how it should approach students and legal education. The language of the two letters betrays a predisposition to employ coercive measures in disregard of fundamental rights, the well-being of students, and the autonomy of universities as a space for deliberation. We hope that these attitudes will change and your future actions will restore the faith of students, faculty, and citizens in the BCI.

Your sincerely,
